Two concertos known only in manuscript, RV and were also dedicated to the count. Storms at sea and phantoms of the night the images cultivated by the first two were staples of opera staging at Venice's Teatro Sant'Angelo, the Venetian theater with which Vivaldi and his father were most consistently associated. Vivaldi's violin concertos Op. Later moved to Anh. Many of the works may have been composed considerably earlier than their print dates suggest, and in the case of this pair RV is conjecturally from before its alternative arrangement from not later than Not to be confused with RV which is a similar motet on the same text but intended for different purposes.
