I would argue that giving our foreign competitors access to our technologies and research and development will cripple our manufacturing sector permanently. In the long term, this means fewer well-paid jobs, lower productivity, declining wages, declining living standards and low economic growth. The UN Development Program reports that the richest 20 percent of the world's Prior to globalization, people had stable, permanent jobs. In addition, the trade deficit is being kept artificially high by Asian countries manipulating their currencies by 20 to 40 percent and the dollar value continues to fall. The fact of the matter is that globalization has reaped terrible consequences website uses cookies to ensure you get the best user experience.
