I live in southwest Michigan, somewhere in a triangular section connecting Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids with Small Town People things Lake Michigan. I can definitely see the charm of living in a small town, or even a small island like the east coast in Canada. You start realizing that you are beautiful and are willing to do more things that you probably would not have done otherwise—with and without your clothes on. It allows you to think and get down to the core of what really matters and what is. For the first time in a few months, there was a wait at the restaurant. It was a warmer weekend in May, so the Chicago crowd mega big city were starting to arrive at their lake houses. So go lay out side naked on your private balcony or in your yard.
