The gray area was much larger when I was back at Galleon. Sorry my man, didn't realize that there were these threads already and also didn't realize that your time was so valuable that taking. Those are good ones.

I learned a lot. I had been building steam and sort of preparing—not preparing. I keep a rolling list and will constantly look into each of these ideas. Keep in mind, 2nd year analysts at your firm are a great resource for some of this as well - they've been through the process, so they can often tell you who is cool about interviewing vs.

In terms of offers, I received them probably within hours of leaving their office. compare this to the number of job slots:
