These hefty essays together make up a hefty volume:

Christopher Marlowe The University Wits.

Both Weiner and Goldfarb argue that Frege did not -- and did not need to -- make

This makes him suspicious of intermediate entities, such as Fregean senses, between the mind and the objects it represents. This theory, when applied to Frege's logical symbolism "Begriffsschrift" justifies its logical laws and rules of inference, by stating that the conclusion of each inference licensed by his system is indeed a semantic consequence of its premises. Ricketts, for instance, argues that the Kerry paradox "The concept horse is not a concept" and indeed any of Frege's uses of "concept" and "object" as contrastive predicates, are elucidatory.

Goldfarb argues that when Frege denies that there is a truth predicate, he is Frege was unquestionably one of the most important philosophers of all time. Frege is generally seen along with

Russell and Wittgenstein as one of the fathers of the analytic method, which dominated philosophy in English-speaking countries for most of the twentieth century.
